AIRBNB $8M CAMPAIGN

2 Airbnb has spent more than $8 million and hired a top political operative to defeat a San Francisco initiative on the ballot Tuesday that could threaten the growth of one of the most valuable global technology companies. Proposition F, which would limit short-term rentals, was brought by affordable housing advocates fed up with the city's housing stock being used as rentals for tourists while residents face skyrocketing rents and evictions. For Airbnb, a defeat in its hometown of San Francisco would be mostly a symbolic blow. REUTERS

Police: Suspected kidnapping report was just family dispute

A woman feared missing after what was reported as a Halloween night kidnapping has been found safe, police announced Sunday evening.

Surveillance footage outside a Sunoco gas station at 52nd and Spruce streets in West Philly showed what appeared to be a kidnapping of an unidentified woman by three men on Halloween night around 10:30 p.m.

However, less than three hours after police released surveillance footage of the incident, the woman was identified and located safe at home.

"The female was upset due to recent personal matters and she had fled from another vehicle while driving with a family member," police announced at 6 p.m. Sunday.

"The video that was released to the media depicts the female's family members grabbing her to take her home where she would receive the full support of her family."

The video surveillance showed the woman resisting a male as he grabbed her after she bought some items inside the store and then struggling with her to make her enter a minivan.

Needles found in Halloween candy

Some sugary treats reportedly had a dangerous surprise inside.

SAM NEWHOUSE

sam.newhouse@metro.us

Trick-or-treaters in suburban Chester County were reportedly exposed to danger by an unknown individual who placed needles in candy bars.

On Halloween, sewing needles were found inside five wrapped Twix bars and one Snickers bar given to five different children in the borough of Kennett Square, police said.

"There are no known injuries and there has been no known ingestion by anyone," Kennett Square Police Department Officer Christopher Gravin said in an email.

The fifth child, 12, brought his Snickers bar to police on Sunday.

"Shortly after noon today, a 12-year-old child turned in a Snickers bar that he found in his candy to contain a similar sewing type needle to that which was found in the Twix bars," police said.

Police are still investigating the incident.

"The candy and packaging have been submitted for processing and examination," the Kennett Square Police Department said. "The Police Department continues to urge parents to check all candy received prior to ingestion, and people with candy left over that was not distributed to check it for tampering."

The candy, which were all "fun-size" small bars, was all handed out from unknown sources to children trick-or-treating in the Stenning Hills area of the borough, which borders South Union Street and West South Street, police said.

The dangerous candy was first reported to police by a parent who had seen similar complaints on Facebook.

"The reporting party [victim] had seen a Facebook post from an unknown source describing their Snickers candy to have needles in it," police said. "This post lead to the reporting party to check his children's candy and discover the sewing type needles in Twix candy."

Tipsters are asked to contact the department at 610-268-3171 or 610-444-0501.

REGIONAL RAIL HEADACHES

There is a huge frustration level with the 2450 6:16 p.m train from Suburban Station to Warminster by all the regular riders. It is late arriving to Suburban every single day and that is not an exaggeration. This is unacceptable.
Recently, performance on all our Regional Rail lines has been below acceptable benchmarks. SEPTA has reviewed the service of our lower performing trains and we will be making schedule adjustments effective Dec. 13 to improve our reliability.

We have looked into the recent on-time performance of Train #2450; our on-time performance committee has analyzed its performance and found that it is being delayed on an earlier trip coming from Wilmington. SEPTA is currently working on making changes to Regional Rail schedules for the new December 2015 schedules, with one of the focus areas being the Warminster Line trains. We appreciate your patience while SEPTA makes these adjustments.

The Route 50 bus #20423 from Parx casino is always late or doesn't show up.
We understand your frustration that the bus has been late on various occasions. We have researched the performance of the Route 50 bus and this specific stop location; our review indicates that congested traffic conditions are impacting the route's performance.

We have made the route supervisor aware of your concerns. We have asked him to make sure that bus operators communicate with passengers, and stressed the importance of customer service.

What is wrong with the West Trenton Line? It cannot seem to get to Suburban Station on time on any given workday Monday through Friday.
We have looked into the recent on-time performance of Train #6327 and understand your frustration that the service performance has not been up to our standards.

SEPTA has constructed an additional track and put into place Positive Train Control (PTC) signal upgrades on the north end of the West Trenton Line to separate passenger and rail freight operations between the Woodbourne and West Trenton stations.

This segment of the West Trenton line is owned by CSX and had seen a significant increase in freight traffic. The additional rail traffic led to congestion and delays, particularly during commuter rush hours resulting in the need for upgrades to the infrastructure. Initial schedule changes were made to address the construction related schedule issues but have not achieved the desired level of service reliability.

With construction impacts coming to an end, SEPTA will make additional schedule changes on Nov. 9 for the West Trenton Line as we work toward to improving the on-time performance. We will closely monitor operations on the line after the schedule change to determine its impact on performance.

House Speaker Ryan rules out work with Obama on immigration

Republicans have fought Obama's unilateral steps that bypassed a gridlocked Congress to try to shield millions of illegal immigrants from deportation.

House of Representatives Speaker Paul Ryan on Sunday ruled out working with President Barack Obama on overhauling U.S. immigration policy, saying it would be "a ridiculous notion" to pursue legislation because Obama cannot be trusted on the issue.

Obama's executive orders, announced last November but put on hold by the courts, would let up to 4.7 million illegal immigrants stay without threat of deportation. It was aimed mainly at helping 4.4 million people whose children are U.S. citizens or legal permanent residents.

The immigration issue has driven a wedge between Hispanics, an increasingly important voting bloc, and Republicans, many of whom take a hard line on illegal immigration, to the benefit of Obama's fellow Democrats. Most of the estimated 11 million illegal immigrants in the United States are Hispanic.

Ryan said he would not try to advance comprehensive immigration legislation while Obama, whose term ends in January 2017, is president.

Ryan speaks after being elected as the new Speaker of the House. GETTY IMAGES

"I think it would be a ridiculous notion to try and work on an issue like this with a president we simply cannot trust on this issue," Ryan said in an interview aired on the CBS program "Face the Nation."

"He tried to go it alone, circumventing the legislative process with his executive orders, so that is not in the cards. I think if we reach consensus on how best to achieve border and interior enforcement security, I think that's fine," Ryan added. REUTERS

Three people hit, killed in New York City by car during trick-or-treat outing

Three people, including a 10-year-old girl, were killed on Saturday in the Bronx when a car slammed into them on a crowded sidewalk during Halloween trick-or-treat festivities.

New York City police said the dead included a middle-aged male, a 21-year-old male and a 10-year-old girl. The three were among many people thronging city sidewalks on Saturday afternoon for annual trick-or-treat candy-collecting celebrations.

The accident occurred on Morris Park Ave in the borough of the Bronx just before 5 p.m. Several other people, including the driver, were injured. No identities were released.

The cause of the accident was under investigation, with varying reports by local media citing witnesses, officials or police sources saying the driver appeared to have suffered a seizure, or might have engaged in a road rage incident with another driver just before the crash.

No treat for soldier in suicide bomber costume at U.S. Army base

A soldier who tried to enter North Carolina's Fort Bragg U.S. Army base dressed as a suicide bomber for Halloween prompted a security alert including a search for explosives, military media said on Sunday.

The unidentified soldier, wearing a costume that appeared to be an explosive vest, tried to pass a checkpoint on Saturday evening, the base said in a Facebook post, which has since been removed, according to Military.com.

The post said the incident resulted in an emergency response that consisted of the gate being briefly closed as explosive technicians cleared the site, according to the military news website.

Base officials were not immediately available for comment. Military.com reported it was unclear if the soldier will be charged.

The base removed the original Facebook post about incident because of comments that were "profane, sophomoric, or did not treat the subject seriously," it said in a subsequent post. REUTERS

Republican Bush says rival Rubio has 'given up'

Republican presidential candidate Jeb Bush pressed his attack on rival Marco Rubio's record of missed Senate votes, saying it showed Rubio had "given up" on breaking through the political gridlock in Washington.

Bush questioned whether Rubio, a U.S. senator from Florida, had shown the leadership skills or level of accomplishment needed to bridge partisan divides and solve longstanding problems.

"In this era of gridlock, it's really hard to break through, and I think he's given up. And I think that's the wrong thing to do," Bush, a former governor of Florida, said in an interview on NBC's "Meet the Press" that aired on Sunday.

"This is about public service, about solving problems ... I can change the culture in Washington." Bush

In one of the most notable exchanges in last week's Republican presidential debate, Bush criticized Rubio for missing Senate votes while campaigning and suggested he resign his seat. But Rubio punched back, accusing Bush of attacking him in an effort to right his struggling White House bid.

Rubio responded again on CBS's "Face the Nation" on Sunday, saying beating Democratic frontrunner Hillary Clinton was more important than missing meaningless Senate votes.

"The truth is, I don't like missing votes, but what I would really hate is to wake up on the first Wednesday of November to the news that Hillary Clinton's been elected president," Rubio said.

Rubio's debate performance won praise and new momentum for a campaign that has been stuck in polls behind Republican frontrunners Donald Trump and Ben Carson.

Bush, meanwhile, has faced repeated questions since the debate about whether his White House bid can survive. He said that was part of the "tribulations" of a campaign. REUTERS

US Navy salvage team seeking to confirm wreckage of sunken El Faro

A U.S. Navy salvage team was preparing on Sunday to launch a remotely operated submersible to confirm that wreckage discovered near the Bahamas was that of the cargo ship El Faro, lost in a hurricane last month along with its 33 crew members.

The team is seeking to retrieve the ship's voyage data recorder, similar to an airplane's black box, as part of an investigation into what caused the ship to sink, according to the National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB). It was the worst maritime accident involving a U.S.-flag vessel since 1983.

The cargo ship's owner Tote Inc. has been hit with four lawsuits filed by relatives of the crew, alleging the ship was not seaworthy and should have changed course to avoid Hurricane Joaquin.

Tote filed for protection in a federal court in Florida on Friday, citing U.S. maritime law and saying the ship was "seaworthy and properly manned" and that the company bears no responsibility for its loss.

As El Faro left port in Jacksonville, Florida, on its way to Puerto Rico, the captain set the ship on what appeared to be a collision course with the powerful storm, a decision that has baffled shipping experts.

The El Faro disappeared on Oct. 1 after the captain reported losing propulsion and taking on water. The crew included 28 Americans, and five Poles.

It was unclear on Sunday what plans were in place to recover the bodies of the crew. A weeklong search and rescue mission launched by the U.S. Coast Guard after the ship went missing found only one body.

Some relatives of the crew complained that not enough was being done to find their loved ones after the Coast Guard called off its search.

"We still don't have any closure. I feel it's not really any better until they find some bodies," Schmiora Hill, 33, of Jacksonville, said on Sunday. Hill is a cousin of Roosevelt Clark, a veteran seaman who was on board El Faro.

The NTSB said in a statement on Saturday that the wreckage consistent with the 790-foot El Faro was found using sonar equipment, lying upright and intact at a depth of almost 3 miles, complicating the search.

ZOMBIES MARCH ON DC

One glance at the tidal wave of zombies in pop culture these days will tell you that we just love the idea of troubles that just won't go away. Politicians, when they've dealt with issues, don't want to face them again. That's why pols in D.C. will be barricading themselves in old barns this week and snatching up pitchforks, because they know old issues are rising again in the Foreman Forecast.

1. SYRIA: Voters usually don't pay much attention to foreign affairs except when you're talking about a distant war and American boots in the ground. But that is precisely what the White House announced this week as part of the ongoing battle against ISIS in Syria. Yes, the numbers are extremely limited and the administration seems to be very reluctant to make the move. But Dems and Repubs alike are roaring as this old debate shakes its moldy shoulders. Expect candidates to be pelted with questions about it.

2. BLACK LIVES MATTER: This is a relatively new movement haunting the campaign trail, but as many candidates have discovered, it can arise suddenly and with powerful effect. Hillary Clinton was confronted at an event in the ATL last week, and while the protestors were eventually removed they took all the headlines with them. That's scary stuff for pols, and the Black Lives Matter folks know it. I expect them to turn up more and more, often striking fear in the hearts of every candidate because at this point no one — Democrat or Republican — knows how to respond.

3. MEDIA MAELSTROM: Hey, I'm not going to whine. I like being a reporter. But after the CNBC debate, we media types are being torched by politicos, especially on the right. I think that will not only continue this week, but could grow hotter. Watch for debate about debates, ground rules, and who gets to play in the sandbox.

Justin Bieber throws another temper tantrum

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

For the second time in a week, Justin Bieber stormed off stage and ended a gig early, this time in Oslo, Norway. One song into the gig, Bieber took a moment to try to mop up a spill at the front of the stage, but when audience members wouldn't listen to him, he whipped off his headset and left the stage, saying, "Never mind. I'm done, I'm not doing the show." The crowd, obviously, was a bit confused.

Also? Dig his apology on Instagram that he clearly didn't write himself. (You can tell because the grammar is pretty decent and it includes a little passive-aggressive Bieber-bashing.) Bieber — or, obviously, someone who works for Bieber — posted a lengthy mea culpa that included, "Sadly it's been a rough week for me — long days, no sleep while having to be 'on,' as they would say, for cameras and fans" and "I don't always handle things the right way but I'm human and I'm working on getting better at responding not reacting." There's a lot going on in there. Like, a whole lot.

Boy George teases Prince tryst

I honestly don't know what to believe with this one. While taping an episode of "The Voice UK," Boy George blurted out a juicy piece of '80s pop music gossip: "I've slept with Prince," he bragged to fellow judge Paloma Faith, according to the Sun, prompting producers to quickly halt the taping. "We just couldn't believe what he had come out with — and the guys in the gallery were beside themselves. The crowd went absolutely wild because they thought they had just witnessed a massive celebrity exclusive," a source says. "Production staff had to come up onstage and speak to them. After that, Boy George started backtracking, saying he hadn't really slept with Prince and that in reality, he just had his poster on his wall. But as far as the crowd were concerned, the cat was already out of the bag." Oh my.

Kathy Griffin isn't running for president

The comedian on Trump, the Oscars and death threats from Demi Lovato fans.

NED EHRBAR
@Nedrick
ned.ehrbar@metro.us

Kathy Griffin doesn't have time to pull punches. The wise-cracking comic is currently hurtling through her 80-city nationwide "Like a Boss" tour — which comes to Carnegie Hall of all places Nov. 12 — and she's keeping her act fresh each night thanks to the likes of Donald Trump.

I'm assuming Donald Trump has become a big part of your act.
I like to call him "President-elect Trump" because as a comedian I kind of want this to keep going even though as a human, and a feminist, I don't. But I do have a fantasy that Melania Trump is some sort of trump card, if you will, and she's the new Jackie O and we don't know it, and she's going to be this incredible ambassador and she's been hiding her multiple degrees from MIT and Oxford. Maybe she's going to be the new Eleanor Roosevelt.

But that would mean Trump is the new FDR?
Which is the next obvious conclusion. That is how crazy it's gotten. I'm not typically a political comedian, but Trump is an ever-changing mood ring of insanity, and I am happy to just keep checking my ring. He's really fooling us all in a way that is entertaining and frightening. I'm more qualified to be president than Donald Trump.

Would you like to formally announce your candidacy?
Well, yes. But I think that my VP should be Donald Jr. and my entire cabinet will be made up of Palins, and then obviously Ann Coulter will be my secretary of defense. We're going to keep America great again. [Laughs] No, I am hashtag ready for Hillary. You can't talk to me about when it's a woman's turn.

Speaking of, can we talk about how ridiculous it is that the only woman in late night is Miss Piggy?
First of all, she's very empowered, and good for her. But you make a really great point. It hasn't been since 1988 that there has been a female in network nightly late-night talk. It's really shocking. It's great that there are men of color and a gay man in cable and late night, but hello? Women are 51 percent of the population. It's now at a point where it's just straight-up shocking. I think that all of the network executives have to realize it's no longer a couple of female comedians bitching and moaning. I'm actually spearheading the Kathy Griffin "It Gets Worse" campaign for female comedians.

You're excited about Chris Rock hosting the Oscars, but what about yourself for the gig?
Oh my gosh, I would love it. There is just a mountain of sexism in Hollywood, and I freely say it. I'm 54 and have two Emmys and a Grammy — I'm halfway to an EGOT — and I just sold out the Kennedy Center in June, and I'm often just not considered for these things, so I don't know. If I can be live on CNN for three and a half hours, I can be trusted.

Death threats from Demi fans

Do you worry about your act making you new enemies?
I'm not saying Demi Lovato is actively trying to kill me, but her fan army, they have taken to the social media and been very specific about ways that they want to put a machine gun up my butt, cut me with razors. In the Clinton era, you could make fun of Monica Lewinsky and ... the dress, and no one tried to kill you for it. I can make fun of Justin Bieber, and the Beliebers don't threaten to kill me, but you go after that 23-year-old Demi Lovato, and those 30 million Lovatics get very specific about ways they want to kill me. It's really kind of new and frightening.

Griffin wants a shot at the Oscars. COURTESY OF KATHY GRIFFIN

David Koechner of the dead

The "Scouts Guide to Surviving the Zombie Apocalypse" star can do horror, but not watch horror.

MATT PRIGGE
matt.prigge@metro.us

In "Scouts Guide to Surviving the Zombie Apocalypse," comedy mainstay David Koechner has the misfortune to play one of the undead — a scout leader who, when turned, won't seem to die, no matter how horrifically the teen cast tries. That meant a lot of time in makeup, though Koechner — known for everything from "Anchorman" to "The Office" to "Hannah Montana" — didn't seem to mind.

The zombie you play won't die. What was the hardest of the attempted murders to do?

Maybe the one where I get clubbed and burned.

I can't imagine they tried to fake-set you on fire, though.

[I had a] stunt double. He did a great job. He has a nice sturdy back for when he got smacked with an oar. I acted that one out, but I didn't have to get smacked.

How was it being turned into a zombie, especially for what seems like a good chunk of the shoot?

It's a choice you make. I chose to enjoy it. It's four hours of makeup. And it's working with people that operate on a very high level. You're working with some of the best prosthetic and special effects people in the industry. It's kind of flattering. They're artists; you're their canvas. We sit around, have great conversations, watch movies, listen to podcasts.

Is the comedic breed the kind of horror you tend to watch?

David Koechner, right, doesn't make it very long before turning undead in "Scouts Guide to Surviving the Zombie Apocalypse." PARAMOUNT PICTURES

I'll tell you the honest truth, I'm not a big fan of horror. I get scared. They stay with me. Ever since I was a kid I would get afraid. At a young age people see it and get titillated and jazzed up. But for whatever reason I got freaked out. Maybe I get too invested.

The horror you've done has tended to be the darkly comic kind, like "Final Destination 5" and "Piranha 3DD."

Did you see "Cheap Thrills"? I wouldn't describe it as a comedy. I didn't know it had as many laughs as it did till I saw it with some festival crowds. I was shocked.

It's more of a drama. It's closer to a play.

Exactly. You could put that thing up as a play. It doesn't have many sets. Stage-wise it would be easy to do. Let's do it — as a musical.

On "Hannah Montana"

You've done some drama, but do you see yourself doing more?

Absolutely. I'm doing one in two weeks. It hasn't been announced yet, but it has a high-level cast. I enjoy expanding my repertoire into anything. Look, man, I did "Hannah Montana," and I've done "Piranha 3DD." That's a lot of f—ing range. And the kids who watched "Hannah Montana," they're older now. I want them to see this picture and go, "Holy s—, is that Uncle Earl?"

That's probably one of the things you're most known for.

I went hiking with my family a couple weeks ago. There were a lot of young people climbing the mountain. It was interesting how many times you'd see kids who were just college-age, and they walked past me and whisper, "That was Uncle Earl!" It's crazy.

Remember how 'Batman' began

Christian Bale made his Batman debut in Christopher Nolan's 2005 film "Batman Begins." WARNER BROS. PICTURES

New on Netflix

MATT PRIGGE
matt.prigge@metro.us

Christopher Nolan wasn't yet a fanboy magnet when he wound up rebooting the Caped Crusader. The rest is history, but his first stab at toughening up the comic book world still feels like a compromise. There's bits of the usual Nolan, notably a first act that jumbles up chronology, in the spirit of "Memento." But there's also a shruggy plot — the kind of who-cares story chiefly there as an excuse for Bat action, plus a poison gas climax that gets out of hand even before there are shots of horses snorting fire from their nostrils. The ending sets up the Joker, but it also sets up the studio letting Nolan take free rein to do what he wants. And again, the rest is history.

"RESULTS"

Andrew Bujalski's "Computer Chess" is one of the weirdest titles floating around Netflix Instant. But you know what's arguably weirder? Andrew Bujalski's follow-up. On the surface it's a nice indie rom-com about a tightly wound personal trainer (Cobie Smulders), a nouveau riche schlub obsessed with her (Kevin Corrigan) and her on-off lover and boss (Guy Pearce). But if it sounds like a no-budget god trying to sell out, it fails in wonderful ways. The plot keeps changing, taking hairpin turns that drag us down strange alleyways, jerking us from naturalistic drama to broad comedy and back again. It should be a mess, but it's all tightly controlled.

Cobie Smulders and Guy Pearce star in "Results." MAGNOLIA PICTURES

M. KENNEDY FOR VISIT PHILADELPHIA

1 Alicia Vitarelli

Anchor, 6abc Action News

• Parades and more parades! I have the honor and absolute pleasure of helping host almost all of the city parades we air here on 6abc. On Nov. 8, we will be live on Independence Mall for the debut of Center City's Veterans Day Parade. Then, before I book it up to Brooklyn to celebrate and eat (and eat and eat more) with my family, I will be live with our amazing team along the route of the 6abc Dunkin' Donuts Thanksgiving Day Parade.

• This time of year I'm all about Sister Mary's Sinfully Delicious Cranberry Sauce. Sister Scullion of Project HOME does amazing things to help the city's needy and hungry, and she employs those down on their luck to help her make her now-famous cranberry sauce. The proceeds come full circle, letting Project HOME help the less fortunate get back on their feet.

• It just so happens that this is my birthday month! That means a lot of celebrating and a lot of dining out (my favorite pastime). I couldn't possibly narrow down a list of my favorite restaurants in Philadelphia. But I will say, if there's fresh pasta and burrata on the menu, I'm in!

COURTESY OF ROCK AVENUE BOW TIES

• Tonight I'm hosting the second annual Blitz, Bow Ties and Bourbon benefit at Union Trust to raise money for my foundation, and I invited some of my favorite chefs, including Francis Hagan from Sbraga Dining, Thomas Harkin from Bank & Bourbon, Josh Lawler from Farm and the Fisherman, Luke Palladino from LP Steak and Palladino's, and Chip Roman from Roman Restaurant Group. Proceeds help the foundation expand education and development programs for youth and families throughout the region.

• The Little Lion is opening in the former Haru spot at Third and Chestnut, and I look forward to heading to Old City to check it out for their grand opening. They tapped chef Sean Ciccarone from Pennsylvania 6 — I'm looking forward to seeing what he does in the kitchen.

• My favorite coffee spot is Cafe La Maude. It's a small place but has great coffee and awesome food. It's a must when going out for Sunday brunch. For food, my favorite place is Barclay Prime. If you enjoy a nice ambiance, good wine and an awesome steak, then this is your place.

• My wife likes tequila, so there is no better place to take her for drinks and authentic Mexican food than Tequilas. If you find yourself wondering which drink to order, I suggest Brent Celek's Margarita.

• Check out the RAIR Trash Bash Silent Auction and Fundraiser on Nov. 11 at the Crane Arts Building. You can bid on one-of-a-kind pieces that RAIR — Recycled Artist In Residency — artists have created from waste materials provided by Philly's most innovative recycling company, Revolution Recovery.

• November is all about giving thanks for what we have and giving to those who are less fortunate. Chosen 300 is one of my favorite organizations, and they offer great opportunities to help feed those in need.

• We love taking the kids to the annual kickoff of the Franklin Square Holiday Festival. Starting Nov. 12, more than 50,000 lights illuminate the square during the Electrical Spectacle. But it's not just for the kids — the festival includes the Barren Hill Brewery Winter Beer Garden.

• Little Smiles hosts its annual celebration and fundraising event, Stars Ball, on Nov. 14. This year's event, "A Night at the Oscars," will award 13 children battling illnesses or other life-altering conditions for their courage and resilience. The children will be dressed up in beautiful gowns, jewels and tuxedos, and will arrive in a stretch limo.

• Look for me tonight at Blitz, Bow Ties and Bourbon with Eagles player Malcolm Jenkins. Great chefs, live entertainment and the city's top movers and shakers make this a must on my list!

• On Nov. 14, I'll be attending the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention's Lifesavers Gala at the Lowes hotel, which is near and dear to my heart, as I am a true believer that courage can conquer anything. My dear friend HughE Dillon of Philly Chit Chat is being honored.

• Talking about celebrities and the paparazzi, I'll be heading out to Valley Forge Casino Resort on Nov. 28 for Artie Lange. We've crossed paths at many society events and parties, and this will be the first time I'll be checking out his full show. After, I'll be checking out the new Vault nightclub.

• I'll be back at it on Nov. 29, making an appearance at the Hottest Brunch Party at Patsy's Pizzeria in Westchester. I love anything centered around Italian cuisine and good conversation — um, that is my way of saying I am a talker!

• I'm excited to be supporting the Jessica Beth Schwartz Memorial Scholarship Fund. This year Jessie's Day, on Nov. 8, will be held at the Independence Seaport Museum, located on the picturesque Delaware River waterfront. I've been a huge supporter of local charity events, and this one seems like it will be fun.

• On Nov. 14, I'll be going to the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention's Lifesavers Gala. This year they are honoring my good friend HughE Dillion for his volunteer work with the foundation. It's a huge honor, and he deserves it.

• I'm looking forward to seeing the musical "Rent" at the Ritz Theatre. I'm a huge fan of Cory Wade from "America's Next Top Model," and I'm looking forward to see him live on stage as Angel.

• I'll end the month celebrating the most magical time of year. Look for me at Christmas Village at LOVE Park. This is one of my favorite traditions as it brings so many people together from around the city to share the joy of the holidays. Plus, Santa will be there to tell me if I've been naughty or nice!

• I'll join Rev. Dr. Herbert Lusk on Nov. 10 at the People For People Inc. 26th Anniversary Gala honoring Rev. Dr. W. Wilson Goode Sr. I'm a proud supporter of Rev. Dr. Lusk and PFP, as we share a common vision of bringing transformation to North Philadelphia.

• Nov. 12 is the ribbon-cutting ceremony and cocktail reception for my newest property, Mural Lofts on Broad and Spring Garden streets. A portion of each unit's rent will be donated to Big Brothers Big Sisters SEPA to support a mentoring program for Ben Franklin High School, located across the street.

• Philadelphia is home to an exceptionally rich and diverse culinary scene — my favorite restaurants include Vernick, Zahav, and Marc Vetri's family of restaurants.

How to deal with a difficult boss

HOW TO GET AHEAD

jobs & education

Feel like your manager isn't giving you proper guidance? Here's what you need to do.

RAQUEL LANERI
@RaquelLaneri
raquel.laneri@metro.us

A recent Gallup study found half of workers leave their job because of their bosses. That's not too cheering. A good boss can make you better at your job, and be your champion when it's time for a promotion. So establishing a rapport with them not only makes your day-to-day more bearable, it's also essential for career advancement.

But, even if your supervisor is remote or hard to read or just unhelpful, that doesn't mean you should throw in the towel. We turned to Mary Schaefer, an empowerment expert, coach, trainer, speaker and consultant for her tips on how to make your relationship with your boss work for you.

High-performing, low-maintenance

The best way to get into your boss's good graces: Do your work while creating as little trouble as possible. "Here's my catchphrase: Be high-performing and low-maintenance," says Schaefer. "Don't put yourself in a position that someone is calling you — or worse, your boss — asking when you're going to get something done. ... Don't let them be surprised or hijacked by something that you did."

Ask what they expect of you

Of course, being high-performing isn't so easy if you have a hands-off administrator who doesn't give you deadlines or set goals for you. "You need to be clear on what your objectives are and how they're measured," says Schaefer. "If your boss gives you vague feedback, you can ask questions like, 'What would that look like?'"

In addition to the duties your boss expects of you, you should know how often you can expect to meet one-on-one with him or her. Put a date on your calendar and make sure you go into the meeting with an agenda.

Communicate effectively

Another thing you should clarify with your boss early on: the best way to reach him or her.

"That's one thing that can cause frustration: when the boss is not responsive to something that an employee sees as a priority," says Schaefer. In those cases, speak up. "If they seem annoyed or defensive, say, 'I'm asking these questions because I want to do a good job.' Your boss may not like it, but they can't argue with you."

Sell your ideas

A lot of young people feel like their ideas aren't being taken seriously by their bosses.

"It's important to learn how to manage their objections," she says. "So maybe come at your suggestions sideways: Instead of saying 'Hey, I have an idea,' ask, 'What do you think about this? Have you noticed this problem? What have we tried so far?' and go from there."

Have a Plan B

At the end of the day, it's your career, and you need to do what's best for you. "I don't think this can be repeated too much," says Schaefer. "But you need to own your career. Think not, 'What can my boss do about this?' and instead 'What can I do?' And have a Plan B: Your employer really does owe you nothing except for that paycheck and the benefits promised you as long as you deliver."

Tweens build an app to help the blind

The Hello Navi team. PROVIDED

A competition asks kids to use tech to help their communities.

RAQUEL LANERI
@RaquelLaneri
raquel.laneri@metro.us

As kids all over the country are discovering, you can do a lot of cool stuff with science, math, technology and engineering (STEM), like design videogames, build robots and blow stuff up.

But you can also use STEM to help your fellow classmates, as six tween girls from Texas discovered recently.

Two years ago, Jacquelyne Garcia Torres, Caitlin Gonzales, Janessa Leija, Cassandra Baquero, Grecia Cano and Kayleen Gonzalez entered and won the Verizon Innovative App Challenge, which asks kids to propose an idea for a mobile app that solves a problem in their school or community. Now, their app, Hello Navi, designed to help a blind classmate navigate the halls of their middle school, has been bought by Visus Technology, which expanding it to college campuses across the country.

"It was such a shock," says Baquero, now in ninth grade. "We were inspired by our classmate Andres," says Torres, 14. "Once the competition came up and we started talking about ideas, we were like, 'Hmm, this would be great for our fellow companion in school right now.' He was our idol."

And, though the girls had no coding experience prior to entering the competition (Verizon connected them with MIT programmers to give them a crash course on app development), several of them have caught the tech bug.

Eighth-grader Grecia Cano was also inspired by the experience in a different way: "When I grow up, I want to be a speech pathologist," she says. "I really like helping people. I love it."

If you want to enter

The Verizon App Challenge is accepting entries for its fourth year. The competition runs through Nov. 24, and winners will get the opportunity to work with MIT experts to turn their ideas into real smartphone apps, as well as up to $20,000 in grants for their schools.

"I really like helping people. I love it."

Saints outlast NFC East-leading Giants

A look around the league as Week 8 wraps up.

LUKE MILLER
@MetroBOS
sports@metro.us

The third-most points in NFL history were put on the board in a game that narrowly avoided going to overtime in a 52-49 Saints' win Sunday.

Eli Manning (30 of 41, 350 yards, 6 TD) and Drew Brees (40 of 50, 511 yards, 7 TD, INT) dueled throughout the afternoon before special teams and a punter decided the game.

After a New York three-and-out, Marcus Murphy returned the ensuing punt into Giants' territory. Murphy, fumbled, but teammate Willie Snead (who also had two touchdown catches on the day) recovered and continued to advance it before being tackled by the Giants' punter Brad Wing. Wing was flagged for a facemask, which set the Saints up for a 50-yard field goal with five seconds left. Kai Forbath converted, and the Giants and Saints both moved to 4-4 on the season.

Chiefs 45, Lions 10
Kansas City recorded their second straight win after beginning the season 1-5 by running all over Detroit for 206 yards. In his third start replacing injured running back Jamaal Charles, Charcandrick West topped 100 total yards for the second straight week.

Texans 20, Titans 6
Deandre Hopkins bounced back from a season-worst outing against Miami last week with 94 yards and a score. Houston's win moved them within a half game of Indianapolis in the division.

Cardinals 34, Browns 20
After falling behind early, Arizona scored the final 27 points of the game in Cleveland. Carson Palmer (23 of 38, 374 yards, 4 TD) had his fifth 300-yard passing day of the season and his second game with four touchdown passes.

Vikings 23, Bears 20
Adrian Peterson had his third 100-yard rushing day of the season, but his first since Week 3 for the Vikings, who climbed to 5-2 with the win. It secures them an early spot as the second wild card in the NFC, a race that they will have to rely on should the Packers' undefeated form continues.

Rams 27, 49ers 6
St. Louis continued to ride Todd Gurley to victories, moving to 4-3 behind Gurley's 133 rushing yards, his fourth straight 100-yard effort. It was a day of big plays for the Rams, who scored on a 66-yard Tavon Austin catch, and a 71-yard Gurley run.

Ravens 29, Chargers 26
The Ravens waited as late as they could to get their second win of the season the same way they got their first one: on the foot of Justin Tucker. Tucker converted a 39-yard field goal as time expired. Joe Flacco (25 of 37, 319 yards, 1 TD) had just his second game without an interception this season.

Buccaneers 23, Falcons 20
For the second straight week Tampa Bay built a large lead, and for the second straight week they lost it. This time, however, they recovered and beat Atlanta in overtime to get to 3-4 and surpass their 2014 win total.

Bengals 16, Steelers 10

Ben Roethlisberger (28 of 45, 262 yards, TD, 3 INT) returned to the starting lineup after four games away, but a 45-yard fourth-quarter drive that began with a Roethlisberger interception ended with Andy Dalton's (23 of 38, 231 yards, 1 TD, 2 INT) lone touchdown pass of the day to A.J. Green. After another Roethlisberger interception, the Bengals would add a field goal. Pittsburgh overcame penalties and a sack to move the ball to Cincinnati's 16 with four seconds remaining. Antonio Brown came down with Roethlisberger's pass, but well out of the end zone, and the Bengals moved to 7-0.

The Saints look to be back on track thanks to the hot arm of Drew Brees. GETTY IMAGES

Temple holds its own despite

The Owls were one play away from upsetting Notre Dame and entering the National Championship discussion.

JON MARKS
@MetroPhilly
sports@metro.us

Oh, so close!

Irish eyes are nearly crying after Temple gave them the Halloween scare of their lives Saturday night, before fabled Notre Dame rallied to pull out a 24-20 win that couldn't help but impress the rest of the country.

Not so much about the 7-1 Fighting Irish, who turned it over twice in the red zone and seemed on the ropes before putting together the game-winning six-play, 75- yard drive. But if ever a losing team showed it belonged on the same field with the big boys, it was Matt Rhule's gang, who insist the sting of defeat will be long gone by the time they take on SMU in Dallas Friday.

And yet if Notre Dame doesn't convert a key third-and-four pass to Philly native Will Fuller moments after Temple had taken a 20-17 lead on Austin Jones' 36-yard field goal, leading to Fuller hauling in DeShone Kizer's 17-yard strike for the game winner three plays later, we might be having an entirely different conversation.

"We know how we messed up," said defensive end Praise Martin-Oguike, whose red zone interception went for naught as the Owls fell to 7-1, though they remain atop the American Conference East at 4-0. "We should've won the game.

"They're a great team, but we're a great team, too. It came down to who made the last play."

It did, but throughout the night it was apparent Notre Dame simply had too much speed and athleticism for the Owls. Kizer's dazzling 79-yard touchdown run off a fake to his back that froze the defense for just an instant — coming moments after the Owls had nudged in front — was a perfect example. At the other end, Irish defenders consistently ran down Temple backs and receivers who seemingly were in the clear.

Still, this one was there for the taking. Even though for the first time all season the Owls couldn't finish the job, it won't diminish from the message they sent to potential recruits or anyone else watching from home.

"We can play with anybody in the country," said Jahad Thomas, who rumbled for 82 yards and a touchdown on 21 carries, but dropped a key third-down pass that forced Temple to settle for a field goal when a touchdown might've put the Irish away. "We knew that a lot of people had us as the underdog.

The Owls can hold their heads high, as proven by their No. 23 national ranking despite Saturday's 24-20 loss. GETTY IMAGES devastating loss

"But we love having that chip on our shoulder. That's kind of the brand of Philly. "

That's what made this one so appealing on a national scope, bringing ESPN's "GameDay" crew to Independence Mall and bringing long-suffering Temple alumni out of the closet. Billed as "Rocky vs. Rudy," it wasn't that long ago Temple was the proverbial 'Little Sisters of the Poor," while Notre Dame was "winning one for the Gipper" under Knute Rockne.

Saturday had all the elements for the classic upset, which would've not only propelled the Owls to 8-0 for the first time but might've landed them in the top 15. But while their dreams of an unbeaten season are gone, Rhule wants them to realize there's still much to accomplish.

"If our team wasn't sure how good they were, they know now. But there are no moral victories. We're not here to lose. We have to go finish it now."

Temple head coach Matt Rhule

"I told them before the game that this better not be the high point of our season," said Rhule, whose 23rd-ranked club holds a two-game division lead over Cincinnati and South Florida, with a trip to USF following SMU. "This was a great couple of days. 'GameDay' was awesome. Our fans were awesome. A loss won't change that 'what's next' mindset they've been spouting all season."

"We're definitely disappointed, because we had them," said senior linebacker Tyler Matakevich, who was in on 13 tackles and had an interception. "But our goal all along has been to win the conference championship.

"At the end of the day, this game has no effect on it. Well watch the film and see what we did wrong and get it corrected."

And try to not to think just how close Temple came to turning those smiling Irish eyes into tears.
